DOUBT SAVING OF WAGE PROVISIONS

Comparatively Few Affected by Part of State Law Held Illegal.

Madison—In view of the ruling of the U. S. supreme court in the District of Columbia case, little hope for saving provisions of the Wisconsin minimum wage law remains to the women. It was held here today. The provisions were held unconstitutional in a federal court decision in Superior yesterday.

Legal officials who handled the case for the state were doubtful of the outcome of the case from the start. Unless the federal supreme court reverses its previous holding, the Wisconsin provisions are likely to be held void, according to Assistant Attorney General Messersmith.

However, the provisions will still have a comparatively small percentage of women employees who minors as well as adults are considered. It is said.

BLAINE HOTLY FLAYED BY LA FOLLETTE CHIEF

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Milwaukee—Charging that Governor Blaine has been on both sides of "almost every important question" and that his administration has been one of reaction instead of progress, Edwin J. Gross, president of the Wisconsin Men's Progressive association, in a statement here today called upon progressives of the state not to compromise "for the sake of expediency."

He announced his support of Lieut. Governor George F. Comings for governor.

Madison—Senator Robert M. La Follette took a hard line in the Democratic senatorial race yesterday when he issued a statement endorsing Harry Smith, La Follette's opponent, by the Rev. O. J. H. Jones of St. Joseph.

Smith was Governor Blaine's first private secretary but resigned as a result of differences with the executive.

The Rev. Mr. Jones is reported to have the governor's support.

Gross attacked the legislative record of the administration, saying the executive has changed his stand on important questions. He further said that if the present administration had been a success, the world would not now be compelled to call on Senator La Follette for help.

The statement concluded with declaration that "the time of Blaine and there will be no progressive cause."

Reykjavik, Iceland—Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator, who has flown here from Pisa, intending to fly across the Atlantic in the wake of the American round-the-world flyers, will accept Fleet Commander Lieut. Lowell H. Smith's invitation to accompany the Americans.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Reykjavik, Iceland—The American army world flyer will be unable to leave today for Greenland at least three days more owing to damage suffered by both planes in an attempted start. Lieutenants Lowell H. Smith and Erik Nelson, the pilots, with their mechanic, Lieut. Neil Arnold and John Harding, Jr., rose early yesterday, hurried by the prospects of being off once more.

Their planes were heavily loaded with fuel for the hop of more than 300 miles to Greenland, and it was this extra weight that caused the trouble. The planes refused to lift from the water. Repeated efforts to get off were in vain and the strain caused the spreader bar on Lieut. Smith's plane to break, while the propeller of the other machine was shattered.

Repairs await the arrival here of the cruiser Richmond with spare parts. The cruiser, which had not to sail in anticipation of the flight, is not expected to reach port before tomorrow.

Lieut. Locatelli, the Italian aviator, who arrived here on Sunday, is still uncertain whether to join the American flyers in the attempt to cross the ocean here from 10 to 15 days longer for the purpose of taking mail parcels. While enroute to Reykjavik from Hornsford, the Italian pilot and his crewmen took some moving pictures from the air, said to be the first ever taken in Iceland.

BAD WEATHER WILL DELAY NO. 20 WEST PAVING TILL 1925

Rock county highway officials have given up the idea of putting the route 20 concrete highway west of Janesville through to Broadhead this fall. Adverse weather conditions for paving work will prevent building all of the remaining eight miles.

Working five and five tenths days last week and on Monday the county force was able to build the pavement on a mile out of the route, about half-way to the Hanover marsh but Tuesday's storm stopped all operations. It is doubtful if work will be resumed before Wednesday.

"Every time we get going good, rain stops the work and prevents high runs," declared Commissioner Charles E. Moore. "There has been less than 50 miles of concrete poured in the entire state and we have laid six miles; despite the poor conditions."

Repairs their conditions will determine just how far the county will be able to pave the road. It is likely the operations will be stopped before the machinery stored on the scene of work in order to clear the road for next year. Engineering data is being prepared for paving route 20 east of Janesville for next year.

On Monday, Aug. 18, the county paving force established a new record, pouring 125 feet in the workday, a total of 1,630 square yards. The record was set by the following: 1st, 11, 816 feet; 2d, 12, 558; 3d, 12, 140; 4th, 15, 025; and 5th, 17, 170 feet in a half day. The runs compare favorably with those of last year, when there was good weather.

Chicago—Testimony was finished today in the case of Anthony Leopold, Jr., and Michael Loeb, confessed murderers of Robert Frank.

Thomas Marshall, legal expert for the state's attorney, was announced as the opening orator for the prosecution.

The court announced that the testimony on the kidnapping charge would be given after the final arguments on the murder indictments. The attorneys agreed this should not last more than a half hour.

"There is only one penalty applicable here," said Mr. Marshall at the start of his argument, "that penalty is death, only to lesser crimes."

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Chicago—Courtesy reigned to the highest degree in the cross examination today of Dr. William O. Krohn, state alienist and last witness in the judicial hearing to determine the punishment of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb for the kidnapping and murdering of Robert Frank.

In contrast to yesterday's proceedings, when the expert and Benjamin Backus of counsel for the defense shouted angry retorts back and forth, smiles and "please" were exchanged today. The expert unflinchingly used "sir" and the attorney never failed to address the witness as "doctor."

Dr. Krohn once found occasion to dig the defense attorneys' excuses, explaining that he and his colleagues had no opinion on the mentalities of the defendants since June 1, and that newspaper interviews quoting him on that subject resulted from his attempts to make "exaggerated claims made by the defense."

The program called for the start of arguments as soon as the cross examination was finished.

Mr. Darrow announced he would ask the court to allow the defense the opening and closing arguments on the theory that the state's proof of mitigation is on the defense.

GALE HITS CITY, DAMAGING TREES AND PHONE LINES

Hundreds of trees were blown down in southern Wisconsin, some in Janesville, when a heavy gale came up at 11 a. m. Tuesday, blowing away the rain storm that had held forth since 3:15 a. m. The Wisconsin Bell Telephone company was experiencing many trouble cases on toll and local lines and trouble calls were being received by the Janesville Electric company at 2 p. m. as the effects of the storm were beginning to be felt by users of current.

The wind, one of the highest of the summer, came up suddenly and swept with terrific force out in the open space of the country. It rose and fell for two hours, during which time there was no telephone connection with Milwaukee or Rockford.

Full extent of the damage could not be learned by 2 p. m. for calls were still being received for repairs. Trees and branches of trees fell across wires. The Milwaukee line was put out temporarily when three poles were blown down 875 miles from the city.

Electric lines out.

M. DAUGHERTY QUIZ UPHELD; DOCKET PLEA

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
Washington—The attempt of the senate Daugherty committee to inquire into the affairs of M. S. Daugherty, former secretary of the navy, was fully upheld by the federal government today in docketing with the supreme court an appeal in the state's unsuccessful contempt proceedings against Mr. Daugherty in Ohio.

A department of justice brief, filed with the court, declared the committee had ample constitutional authority to inquire into the conduct of Daugherty as held by the lower court to exercise judicial functions.

The brief declared also that the committee had not made charges against Daugherty, but only sought to establish the house of representatives, under the provision phrasing the power to impeach in the hands of the house.

The senate inquiry was not a personal investigation of the former attorney general, the government argued, but was directed to produce evidence in support of the charges against Daugherty's exercise of legislative duties.

The building is 250 feet in area, with a basement 250 feet by 50 feet, and about 2,500 feet of outside concrete flooring. In all the area provides for a total of 100,000 square feet. The structure is built of concrete, steel, steel-sash glazing and brick, and constitutes a unit that may be added when necessary by removal of a specially constructed steel wall designed to come for that necessity.

Virtually all of the space is under contract and the show offered to the public is rated as an educational one. Prospects for a fine exhibition for the opening season are good, it is stated.

Many Wisconsin manufacturers and business houses, however, which have at the state fair, have taken space and will show this time, O. E. Hemer, fair secretary, says.

SWINE INFECTION STILL 25 PERCENT

During the week from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1924, seven Wisconsin packing houses killed 521,762 hogs and the federal inspectors found 226,326 infected with tuberculosis. The swine diseases have been collected by Dr. Arthur Killian, Janesville, Wisconsin livestock commissioner, the percentage of infection has been around 25 percent.

Every hog retained represents a loss to the farmer who raises market hogs, for the packer charges this loss back as part of the overhead expense to all the hogs he buys.

It is now generally accepted that infected dairy by-products is not the only cause for infection among swine. The cause has been traced from farms where the dairy cattle have been vaccinated and without a reactor animal for a period of 25 days. Authorities now blame the

BRYAN CHEERED BY THROUG AS PARTY BIRTH IS OFFERED

Governor Bryan paid a tribute to his party's standard bearer, John W. Davis, who had just been elected to the U. S. Senate, and described the political organization that nominated him as one of the greatest achievements of the party.

Wilson's name was mentioned by both Senator Davidson and Gov. Bryan, who cheered to the echo, as were declarations by the latter that the democratic platform was broad, strong and progressive enough to satisfy those who believe in "that great democratic principle of equality before the law"; that the party presents a program of progressive policies for which the party stands as a unit without the intervention of faction, bloc or section; and that the democrats entered the campaign "with a spirit of harmony and unity of purpose."

CHARLES BRYAN'S SPEECH ACCEPTING PARTY NOMINATION

Lincoln, Neb.—Gov. Charles W. Bryan, Nebraska, in accepting the democratic vice presidential nomination here last night, praised the party platform as broad, strong and progressive enough to satisfy the people of Lincoln and all the people of the nation, and said that the party would give all the support to our national leader that his ability will permit.

The audience of the nation, composed of diverse peoples and activities, requires that the desires and interests of each shall be subject to the rights and needs of all, with individual groups, factions, and organizations restrained to the extent that equal rights of others shall not be impaired, he declared.

The democratic platform, Gov. Bryan asserted, upholds the ideals of America, demands a return to honesty and equality in government, and outlines the legislative and administrative requirements for such restoration.

"It is the most progressive platform ever promulgated," he declared.

He paid a tribute to his running mate, saying the spirit of unity rose and reason triumphed in the nomination of "that able lawyer, that trained diplomat, that experienced statesman, that champion of the rights of humanity, that progressive democrat, John W. Davis."

Campaign Contributions. "The buying of immunities, issuing of permits, holding of tariff schedules and the granting of government oil leases in return for campaign contributions must be un-roped and destroyed if this government is to endure," he asserted, adding that men must be selected for public positions because of honesty and ability, rather than social qualities or political strategy.

Every citizen must have the right to the sooner because of women's political activity, and the welfare, education and protection of child life and the care of mothers are of first importance, he said.

Labor must be dealt with humanely, asserted Gov. Bryan.

"All legislation for the benefit of the wage earners rests on the first sentence of our platform's labor plank. Labor is not a commodity; it is human," he said. "The rapaciousness of industry have their place and should be protected in their business, but those whom they employ and whose labor they direct have rights sacred and essential as their employers to industrial welfare and one political progress."

He said that "the refusal of the present republican administration to permit the railway mail employees to receive a living wage at American standards causes will ruinously to labor and illustrates their economy program which is at the expense of labor." He listed the democratic party as championing wage earners' rights to bargain collectively, to the eight hour day and to protection against government by injunction and as the first large party to declare for a secretary of labor.

The democratic party's pledge of all its energies towards outlawing war could not be stronger and it expressed its belief in a large majority of the American people. "Our party," he added, "will endeavor to secure world disarmament by international agreement, and it is condition precedent to peace. It will also strive for an international agreement providing for a referendum on war except in case of actual or threatened invasion. All international agreements can be made to

JOY AND PATHOS IN KITE TOURNEY

Some Fly and Some Don't, Much to Disappointment of Fond Builders.

Under a sky that threatened rain, with a favorable breeze from the south, nearly 75 children gathered at the fair grounds Monday afternoon for the annual playground kite tournament, and converted the spaces in the rear of the grand stand into a miniature flying field, with as much excitement in "making off" and "catching" various maneuvers in the sky.

Five points toward the playground championship for this year were awarded to each kite that flew, and these points were given for an entry, even though it did not fly. The Douglas school accumulated the most points, 81, having a total of 18 kites, 16 of which were in the air. The Jefferson won second, with 19 kites, 11 of which flew, and the Adams had 20 points, with 16 kites, 10 of which flew.

The driver of the car was badly cut by the right wheel when the wind-blown brake and the 20 acres can be purchased at a price of $2,000 or more or less in the tract involved.

Nowhere in the county is there a more outstanding site for a park. It may be that later the committee will recommend several locations for the use of the public. The lakes are being taken up by private ownership and it is growing so hard to find a picnic and camp site that the state and county authorities are giving this matter careful consideration.

The committee did not want to make a report until all the members of the board had an opportunity to see the place and it is presently requested all officials and members of the supervisors board be at the picnic Sunday.

PLAN PICNIC AT CARVER'S ROCKS

Affair Sunday Will Let People Learn Beauty of 20-Acre Tract.

Carver's Rocks, the great beauty spot of Rock county, is likely to be a county park. In order that the county board and all the public officials of the county as well as others who desire may see this place where scenic delight reigns, there will be a county picnic on Sunday next, August 24.

At the last meeting of the county board the purchase of Carver's Rocks was considered and a committee consisting of Dr. C. W. Merriam, Beloit, Frank Hoffman, Spring Valley and Olaus S. Royzman, Rockford, was named to investigate and report.

This committee has gone into the matter very thoroughly. The land has been surveyed and the 20 acres can be purchased at a price of $2,000 or more or less in the tract involved.

Nowhere in the county is there a more outstanding site for a park. It may be that later the committee will recommend several locations for the use of the public. The lakes are being taken up by private ownership and it is growing so hard to find a picnic and camp site that the state and county authorities are giving this matter careful consideration.

The committee did not want to make a report until all the members of the board had an opportunity to see the place and it is presently requested all officials and members of the supervisors board be at the picnic Sunday.

MEETING OF ALL CANDIDATES TO BE HELD FRIDAY NIGHT

In accordance with the fixed policy of securing information for the standing of candidates for public office on the live issues of the day, the local League of Women Voters has arranged a citizens' meeting to be held at 8 p. m. Friday, when it is expected that all candidates will appear and answer questions and explain their views upon the issues. The League feels it is important that every citizen should know for whom he or she is voting, and also what his convictions are upon the live issues of the day.

Also, for the reason of securing as much data as possible to guide the voter in casting his or her ballot, they have sent out questionnaires to candidates for local offices, both district and county, and in all instances except one they have had their questions answered promptly and fully. This exception was Cassius S. Whitely, candidate for sheriff who did not answer the communication.

Sherriff Candidates Respond
The following questions were turned how long a resident of Wisconsin, where educated, present business, what information given, etc. The attitude of the prohibition law was elicited by the following question: "As the enforcement of the prohibition law has been a failure, do you believe it should be enforced, and if elected, will you do your best to enforce the same?" On the question of appointment of deputies, he said: "I believe every deputy should be appointed by the sheriff, and I will have to be recommended as a day man."

The last question asks, "Can we trust you to select deputies who are in sympathy with prohibition laws, and who will be zealous in enforcing the same?" On the question of enforcement, Charles Barth answered as follows: "I am a day man and believe the prohibition law should be enforced, and if elected, will do my best to enforce the same."

On the question of appointment of deputies, he said: "I believe every deputy should be appointed by the sheriff, and I will have to be recommended as a day man."

To the same question, John C. Watson answered: "I would do everything in my power to enforce the laws, and I would want the assistance of every good law-abiding citizen."

Wilding seemed suddenly to have undergone a transformation. His gloom had fallen from him. He looked up at his old friend and, smiling, answered him. "It means, Nick, that Walters would have me wear might be well enough for a ride to the coast such as you propose, they are not at all suited to the journey I intend to make."

"You're intending to journey to Tower Hill?"

"In that direction," answered Mr. Wilding suavely. "I am for London, Nick. And you shall come with me. I don't save us. Do you keep a foot on the under that best of hair?"

Wilding explained, and by the time Walters returned with the boots, Trenchard was walking up and down the room in an odd agitation.

"Odds my life, Tony," he cried at last. "I believe it is the best thing."

"The only thing, Nick."

"And since all is lost, why... Trenchard blew out his cheeks and snarled first into palm. "I am with you," said he.

CHAPTER XXIV
Justice

It has fallen to my lot in the course of this veritable chronicle of the life of Anthony Wilding, to connect with the rebellion in the West, and of his wedding and post-nuptial winning of Ruth Westmacott, to relate certain matters of incident and detail which may be accounted strange. But the strangest yet remains to be related. For in spite of all that had passed between Wilding and Ruth, the Westmacotts on that memorable night of Sunday to Monday, on which the battle of Sedgewood was lost and won, and the end of that time, the month of July, we find him not only back at Lupton House, but once again the avowed suitor of Mr. Wilding's widow. For, after the manner of the history which it is to be doubted whether history furnishes a parallel. Indeed, until the circumstances were sifted it seems wild and incredible. So let us consider them.

On the morrow of Sedgewood, the town of Bridgewater became invested—infested was no word too strong a word—by the King's forces and the King's army. The King's army, and there began a reign of terror for the town. The prisoners were choked with attendant and suspected rebels. From Bridgewater to Winton, 2000, the road was become an avenue of gallows, each bearing its repulsive commerce-laden burden for the King's commands were unquell, and hanging was the order of the day.

It is not my desire at this stage to surfeit you with the horrors that were perpetrated during that hideous week of July, when no man's life was safe from the royal butchers. The awful campaign of defilement and his four associates were to follow, but it is doubtful if it could compare in ruthlessness with that of Faversham and Kike. At least, when Jeffery came, men were given a relative what looked like it—and there remained them a chance, however slender, of acquittal, as many lived to prove thereafter. With Faversham there was no such chance. And it was of this circumstance that Sir Rowland Blake took the fullest and the cowardliest advantage.

There can be no doubt that Sir Rowland was a villain. It might be used for him that he was a creature of circumstance, and that had circumstances been other it might have been a credit to his name. But he was weak in character, and out of that weakness he had developed a feroceous strength in villainy. Failure had dogged him in everything he undertook. Broken at the gaming-tables, hounded out of town by creditors, he was a desperate striver to regain his fortunes and, as we have seen, he was not averse in his endeavors to achieve that end.

Ruth Westmacott's fair inheritance had seemed an easy thing to conquer, and to his conquest he had applied himself to suffer defeat as he had suffered it in all things else. But Sir Rowland did not yet acknowledge himself beaten, and the Bridgewater reign of terror dealt him a fresh hand—a hand of triumph. With this he came boldly to renew the game.

He was as smooth as oil at first, a very penitent, confessing himself mad in what he had done, and on Sunday night—mad with despair and rage at having been defeated in the noble task to which he had turned his hands. His penitence might have had the effect upon the Westmacotts had he not known how to insinuate that it might be best for them to lend an ear to him—and a forgiving ear.

You will tell Mr. Westmacott, Jasper," he had said, when Jasper told him that they could not receive him, "that he would be unwise not to see me, and the same to Mistress Wilding."

And old Jasper had carried his message, and had told Richard of the wicked smile that had been on Sir Rowland's lips when he had uttered it.

Now Richard was in many ways a changed man since that night at Weston Zoyland. He had been wrought in him as old as was sudden, and it dated from the moment when with tears in his eyes he had written Wilding's hand in farewell. Where previous had been, Richard found himself converted by example. He contrasted himself in that stressful hour with great-souled Anthony Wilding, and saw himself as he was, a weakling, street-wise, but without repentance and a fine ambition to be worthy, to resemble as nearly as his nature would, that great man.

Wilding whom he took for pattern. He changed his ways, abandoned drink and gaming, and gained thereby a healthier contentment. He developed a taste for Scripture-reading, brought him of prayers, and even took to saying grace to his men in the kitchen—his men, it came to him, was a curious thing—the swing of his son's pendulum threatened now to carry him to extremes of virtue and piety. "O Lord," he would say at times a day, "Thou hast brought up my soul from the grave; Thou hast kept me alive that I should not go down to the pit."

But underlying all this remained unfortunately the inherent weakness of his nature—indeed, it was that very weakness and malleability which rendered his sudden and wholesale conversion possible.

Upon hearing Sir Rowland's message, his heart faltered, despite his good intentions, and he agreed that he would see him. But what the baronet might have to say.

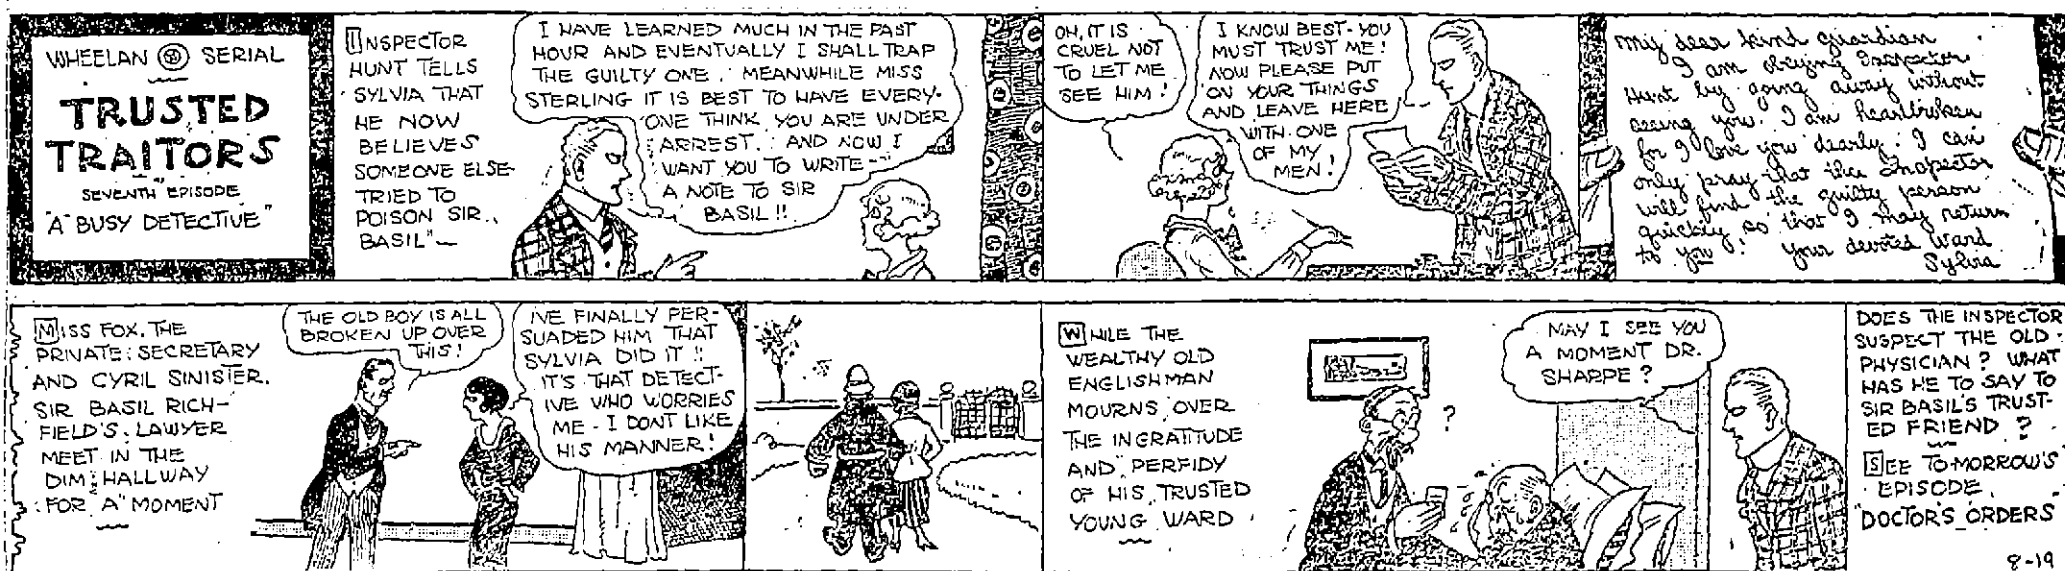

It was three days after Sedgewood, and poor Ruth was worn and exhausted with her grief—believing Wilding dead, for he had sent no message since the day of his capture. The thing he went to do in London was fraught with such peril that he foresaw but the slender chance of escaping with his life. Therefore, he had argued, why console her now with news that he lived, when in a few days the headman might prove that his end had been his only destiny? To do so might be to give her cause to mourn him twice. Again he was haunted by the thought that, in spite of all, it may have been right that he should have moved her at that last meeting. Better, then, to wait; better for both their sakes. If he came safely through his ordeal it would be all the more reason to bear her news of his preservation.

In deepest mourning, very white, with dark stains beneath her eyes to tell the tale of anguished vigils, she received Sir Rowland in the withdrawing-room, her brother at her side. To his expressions of deep penitence he found them cold; so he passed on to show them what disastrous results might ensue upon stubborn maintenance of this attitude of theirs towards him.

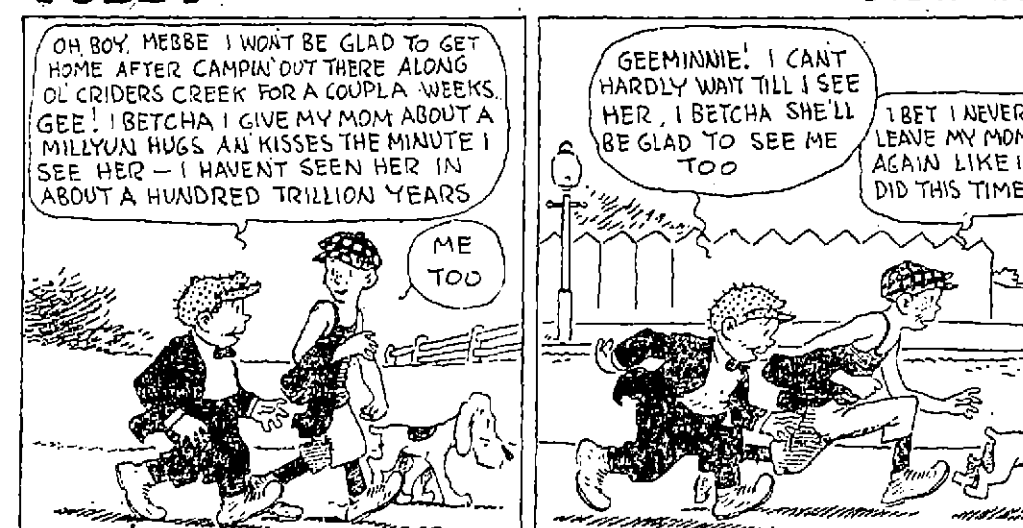

"I have come," he said, his eyes downcast, his face long-drawn, for the week of July, when no man's life was safe from the royal butchers. The awful campaign of defilement and his four associates were to follow, but it is doubtful if it could compare in ruthlessness with that of Faversham and Kike. At least, when Jeffery came, men were given a relative what looked like it—and there remained them a chance, however slender, of acquittal, as many lived to prove thereafter. With Faversham there was no such chance. And it was of this circumstance that Sir Rowland Blake took the fullest and the cowardliest advantage.

YOUR BABY and MINE
By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred is happy to advise mothers about the care of their children of any age, or any subject which does not belong in the field of the doctor.

HURRYING THE BABY ALONG

The first child is always the victim of the impatient process. Being the center of attention, his eager parents cannot wait until the different stages of his development arrive naturally, but must force them. As soon as the child shows the slightest evidence that he has a backbone and struggles to raise himself upright the parents feel that he "won't" to sit alone and so, with many privates, they push him up and force him to support his back.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Shortly after last Christmas I became acquainted with a young man three or four years my senior. He was attractive, intelligent, and very kind. He was a student at the law and although my friends made remarks about him I continued to go with him as he always treated me with the greatest respect and I went to love him and gave up all my other boy friends. He claimed he loved me and told my friends and even his mother that he loved me and intended to marry me. Several times we had quarrels about his going out with other girls but he always said it was all right for him to go with them but he would never go with any other girl except me. Of course I never consented to such a condition and after a week or two he always came back, promising to give up girls and do better. Last week he told me he was going to marry me and I was very happy. He tried to have dates with other girls and came to see me on off nights. I told him he could do that if he wished, but I told him I would not be his wife. Now we have parted, he is telling my friends or rather implying that I am not the kind of girl they think I am, which is a great deal. His mother asked me to overlook anything her son might do because everything would be all right. Please give me your opinion on this boy and whether I should give him another chance under the circumstances.

The boy will never be a good friend because he cannot be trusted. Try to pay no attention to the things he says about you, and do not say things to run him down. Your friends know you for what you are and if you do not strike back they will continue to respect you and will believe in you instead of him. What his mother says means nothing because things will not come out all right with such a girl. It looks very much as if he was spoiled and selfish and did not know how to be a true friend. Do not let him come back even if he wants to.

Dinner Stories

An advertising agent was away from his home city for a few days recently. He left last summer's straw hat in charge of his partner with the remark: "I'll be back with a new one."

Some careless visitor sat on the bed, making an ample aperture in the coverlet.

Jim thereupon placed his partner's hat with the latter's accumulating mail and carefully decorated it with the legend in ink: "Opened by mistake."

The London practitioner, Dr. Abernethy, used to say that he once encountered a sensible woman, with whom he had the following consultation regarding an injured hand: "Abernethy—Bruise?" "Patient—Bruise."

"Abernethy—Dog?" "Patient—Cat."

"This may have inspired the cartoon showing the interior of a drug store, the chemist and a battered customer, with the chemist to the customer whose face is covered with bruises and scratches:—The cat, I suppose?" "Woman—No, another lady!"

Two Scotsmen were taking a walk and were hot and tired. "Haw, ye get any food wi' ye, Dougal?" asked one.

"Aye, a bottle of whisky. What hae you, Angus?" "Dried tongue!" "Glad! Then we'll have halves wi'!"

ANSWERS TO LETTERS

Dear—As you are more than 30 pounds overweight, a general reduction will be better for you than to try to reduce bust and hips. Even though you do not eat a great deal, you may be eating mostly the fat producing foods, such as starch, sweets and fats.

An unpleasant odor from the breath may be traced to a poor digestion, or trouble with the teeth, throat, or nasal passages.

Gypsy Queen—In some cases a weak solution of borax water will take the curl from hair.

If you wear high heels, it would account for the enlargement of your ankles, also the cracking sounds. Massage your ankles each night and rest them by frequently changing your shoes.

It is the best plan to dampen the hair with kerosene and roll a towel around the head overnight to protect the bedding.

This treatment will destroy the active vermin. Shampoo the hair thoroughly next morning, and if any eggs still cling to the hair shafts they can be removed by combing with a fine toothed comb kept wet in vinegar.

Blue Eyes—You cannot make your lips thin. If you take good care of your teeth they will be attractive and (a) make very little difference in your appearance if your lips are a bit too full.

F. M. C.—Peroxide or witch hazel will sometimes bleach off the scars left by a burn. Use these simple remedies do not improve the condition you had better wait for the skin to make its own recovery.

For hands that are red, the skin rough and lined from hard work, use a lotion made by mixing together two ounces of glycerine, two ounces of water and six tablespoonful of lemon juice. Massage cream or fine oil into the skin at least once a day.

At 18 years, with height of 5 feet 3½ inches, your weight of 125 pounds is only slightly above normal.

Swimming will help you also as all arm movements exercise the chest and back.
